PACIFIC FLYER IS FORCED BACK

CAPTAIN GILES, BRITISH ACE, FAILS IN HOP FOR HONOLULU

Plane Returns to Field at San Francisco.

FOG IS BLAMED

New Zealand Was Objective of Daring Airman.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19.—An impenetrable fog which was so dense that it weighted down the plane today halted an attempt of Captain Frederick A. Giles, British war ace, to fly from the municipal airport near here to Hawaii—the first leg of a proposed flight to Australia.

Unable to Chart Course.

Captain Giles returned to the airport at 9 a. m. less than 45 minutes after he had taken off on his dangerous flight at 8:17 a. m.

The heavy fog was encountered over the lightship anchored off Golden Gate. The aviator on his return said he was unable to chart a course through it.

Makes Perfect Landing.

At 9:02 a. m. Captain Giles shut off his motor. He was coming over the runway and he landed at 9:03 a. m.

He made a perfect landing and started taxiing toward the hangar.

When the plane was brought to a stop, Captain Giles replied to inquiries that he had gone out over the ocean as far as the San Francisco lightship, where he encountered a heavy fog blanket, which made it impossible to follow any definite course.

IN China a labor party is trying to seize Canton, martial law is declared and more of China's 400,000,000 join Confucius and perhaps hear what he thinks of fighting China.

WHEN Bertrand Russell visited and wrote about the Chinese, he concluded that their salvation would be to wait, endure, let the whites kill themselves off. Then the Yellows would rule.

China is not taking that advice. Yellows are as foolish as whites about killing.

JINX $100,000 AGAIN BOBS UP IN OIL QUIZ

By GEORGE E. DURNO.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The government today seized $100,000 from Harry M. Blackmer, an oil man, who refused to return from Europe to testify in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial.

The seizure was authorized under the Walsh act which provides for confiscation of property up to $100,000 of a witness who flees the country and declines to answer a subpoena.

Action on order from Justice S. D. S. Doheny, who ordered the Fall-Sinclair trial, E. C. Snyder, Marshall, and S. R. Callahan, chief deputy, went to the office of the U. S. district attorney and took $100,000 in Liberty bonds which had been deposited by Blackmer's attorneys, Nathan I. Miller, ex-governor of New York and George Gordon Battle. The bonds were transferred to a safety deposit box and placed under government seal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The jinx figure of the oil scandals—one hundred thousand dollars—again basked in the spotlight today as the government continued relentlessly its efforts to bring the accused principals to justice.

The $100,000 figure first came to light when the government charged that E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, gave that amount to former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall in return for a lease on the Elk Hills naval

CHICAGO LABOR LEADER SHOT

Alleged Gangster Admits Plot to Maim Worker.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—John P. McLaughlin, labor organizer and alleged member of the notorious Sheldon gang of rum runners, was reported dying at the Bridewell hospital today as the result of bullet wounds inflicted by a police officer.

In what is believed to be a death-bed statement, McLaughlin is said to have confessed that he had planned to maim for life a man who had refused to join the Dental Laboratory Mechanics' union of which McLaughlin is organizer and financial secretary.

Henry Attles, president of the union, was captured in the same raid in which McLaughlin was shot. He, too, confessed the plot to maim the non-union holdout, police said.

Attaches of the state's attorney's office, specially appointed to investigate the many recent cases of labor terrorism, thwarted the plot after they had been tipped off by a girl who was said to be a jilted sweetheart of one of the terrorists.

"I'M GOING TO TEAR THINGS WIDE OPEN," REMUS, ON TRIAL FOR MURDER, DECLARES AFTER CLASH

Remus literally shook his fist under Basler's nose as he shrieked: "When you were on the eastern trip (during the taking of depositions) you drank pints and pints of whiskey—you did so." Basler again appealed to the court, but Remus continued: "Murder is the charge. My life is at stake. I will show by proper evidence, Mr. Basler, that you drank liquor by the pint, not the ounce."

The court reprimanded Remus and warned him he may lose his right to be co-counsel for himself in the trial if he persisted in indulging in personalities.

In his cell today, Remus declared he will not be stopped, that he has other charges to make and that he will "back them up by evidence. He said he would make the opening statement for the defense on Monday, after Taft delivers the state's opening argument.

The jury was taken last night on an inspection trip to the scene of the murder, at Eden Park, where on the morning of October 6, Remus shot and killed his wife as she was on her way to court to divorce him. The jury also visited Remus' "dream palace" on Price Hill. Closely guarded by bailliffs, the jury will be sequestered at a hotel over the weekend.

The jury is comprised of two women, one a girl of 23 and a matronly looking woman of 63, an eleven men. There are thirteen jurors some of whom is an emergency juror who will act only in the case of illness or some other good reason incapacitates one of the regular jurors.

"I am well pleased with the looks of the jury," said Remus. "I think they'll give me a fair deal."

By JAMES L. KILLEN.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 19.—"I am only started. I'm going to tear things wide open in this trial."

George Remus, the amazing individual who is staging a spectacular, personally-conducted defense in criminal court against the charge of murdering his wife, Imogene, made this declaration emphatically today as he sat in his cell and mapped out the line of attack he will pursue when the trial is resumed on Monday. There was no session of court today.

Remus seemed rather pleased, over the sensation he created shortly before the adjournment Friday when he broke into a wild rage and almost came to blows in court with the Chief Prosecutor, Charles P. Taft, and his assistant, Carl Basler, whom he flayed mercilessly. Enraged because Taft charged there were other reasons beside his conviction on a liquor violation charge that caused his disbarment as an attorney in Illinois. Remus, shaking with rage, and his usually resonant voice rising to a hysterical falsetto, screamed at Taft: "I would wreck you physically if I had you in the corridor."

And Remus, a compactly built 200-

Pennzoil furnished perfect lubrication

THE Studebaker Corporation turned loose three stock Commanders on the Atlantic City speedway to be driven at top speed for 25,000 miles. Two roadsters averaged 65.31 miles per hour and a sedan over 61 miles per hour. Practically every existing stock car record was smashed. After exhaustive preliminary tests, Pennzoil was chosen to lubricate every moving part of all three cars. At the end of this amazing performance, official inspection of the cars by Studebaker engineers and A. A. A. contest board, found all three motors still in perfect condition. Another indisputable proof of Pennzoil quality.

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "MONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," etc.

CHAPTER LXIII.

"Ted asked me to marry him—again, last night," Sally told Aunt Em the next morning as they sat at breakfast.

The little white breakfast room was gay and cheerful with clear autumn sunlight, the percolator bubbled in the middle of the table, and the fragrant wood fire cracked merrily in the grate.

Sally, herself, in a warm wool dressing gown that exactly matched the scarlet geraniums in the windows, looked as bright as the morning.

Only Aunt Em was gloomy and blue. Her face was grim as she lifted it from the newspaper she was reading.

"Oh, he did, did he? Well, I hope you told him to run around the block," she said tartly.

Then she bent her eyes once more to the paper in her hand. "Here's a news item about Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt," she said. "She's bought the old General Putnam inn at Brooklyn, Conn., and is going to run it. . . . You see what I told you, Sally. Better women and finer ladies than I have taken to running inns these days. Look at Alice Foote Macdonald, too, in New York! They say she's made a million dollars out of her tea-rooms—" She glanced up at the walls of her own house, and for once her eyes were almost dreamy.

"I have a brand new idea for this place," she said.

Sally could tell from the look on her face, that she was bringing up another scheme. But she did not question her. The only way to get things out of Aunt Em was to let her take her own odd time about telling them.

"Here's the postman," she said, and flew to get the letters that he dropped into the mailbox on the front porch.

There were two of them. They were both for her, and they were post marked "Bermuda."

The first of them was from Mrs. Jerome. Sally read it aloud.

"Dear Sally," Mrs. Jerome had written. "I know I have not written you for a long time, but I've been so busy with your poor papa who really seems to be getting better under my loving and tender care. We sit under the trees all day long, with nothing to do but talk or read—"

"I'll bet that makes a hit with your mother!" snapped Aunt Em, bitterly. "Just sitting around doing nothing but collecting fat all day long!"

Sally went on reading: "We certainly are enjoying it here, but we could use a little more money, so if you can coax any out of your Aunt Em try to do it, please."

"Fine chance!" snorted Aunt Em, her eyes flashing.

"Millie is having a beautiful time with her young South American," remarked Aunt Emily. "He is quite frantic about her, and really it is just like a wonderful love-story to hear her tell about him—all the things he says to her, and the way he looks at her. The poor child needs some new clothes, for he has seen almost everything she has in the way of hats and dresses. She is so blue because she has nothing pretty and fresh to wear. So send some money without fail."

"Love, from Mother."

"To bad about Millie and her clothes!" remarked Aunt Emily. "I'll bet she has five dresses to her one! And I'll send no money down to Bermuda to doll her up in a lot of clothes for some greasy South American to look at! Not while my name's Emily Ann Jerome! Read the other letter, Sally."

Sally tore open Millie's envelope, and unfolded the sheet of pale pink perfumed paper within.

Millie did not know how to spell, and her handwriting was like a child's handwriting—large and sprawling and hard to read.

"Sally, dearest," she began, affectionately. "do you want to do the very sweetest thing possible for your own little sister? Because if you do, I shall never be through thanking you. I want some money for some new clothes. You see, honey love, all of my own things look so faded and old down here in the sunshine."

"I have a new sweetie—a coffee planter from Buenos Aires—and I want to make a ten-strike with him. But how can I, without a lot of new things? Just for the fun of it I told him we were quite rich, and how can I live up to that unless I have some new pretties and plenty of them? So please send me every nickel you can scrape together right away. I should have written you weeks ago, but, dear, I've been so busy looking after poor Daddy-boy."

"Best love always, from Millie."

"They're a fine pair!" sniffed Aunt Em when Sally had laid both letters down beside her plate. "Never writing you a line until they needed some money! That's just exactly like them, though! Just what you'd expect from them." She got up and carried her empty coffee cup and plate into the kitchen.

"I wash my hands of them!" she tossed back angrily, over her shoulder. "And if YOU send them money, you ARE goofy!"

But Sally did. She had about $40 laid away in her handkerchief box upstairs, and she took it with her when she and Aunt Em set out for down town that afternoon.

They had left Hilda in charge of the house, with orders to tell everybody who came that The House by the Side of the Road was closed—and closed for good and forever.

Aunt Em stopped the car at the gate for a few minutes while she ripped down the swinging wooden sign that hung above the gate-posts. She threw it into the road and climbed back into the car.

"Where are we going?" asked Sally, as they rolled along in the warm wind.

"Down town," answered Aunt Em. "Yes, I know that. But where are we going when we reach down town?"

"You'll see," Aunt Em said mysteriously. "You'll see, girl."

Sally wondered how she could lose her aunt for a few minutes while she went to a telegraph office and sent the $40 down to Millie in Bermuda. . . . Forty dollars was little enough to send, but it was all she had, and it was plenty to buy Millie a simple little silk sports dress and one of the large floppy pink hats that were her favorite headgear.

"I have a little business to attend to," she said. "While you're parking the car, I'll slip away and do it, Aunt Em. Where shall I meet you?"

Aunt Em's clever face sharpened. "You're going to send those worthless people your hard-earned money, aren't you?" she asked, and Sally's flush was all the answer she needed. "But go ahead and do it if you want to! It's nothing to me what you do with your own money. Only you're a fool!"

She stood outside the telegraph office while Sally went inside and sent Millie the money.

"I could just shake you!" was all she said when Sally came out, and they started along the crowded pavement toward Thirteenth street.

"Oh, well, Mother said she needed some money, too," the girl replied, soothingly, "and I wired Millie to give her part of the little bit of money I sent."

"You don't think for a minute that Millie will, though, do you?" Aunt Em exploded. "No, sir-ree! She'll spend every red cent on her own silly back! I wish she would marry her South American and leave the rest of us in peace! Here's what I wanted to show you this afternoon."

She shoved Sally through the crowd to the front of an antique store, halfway down Thirteenth street. The windows were filled with hooked rugs, mahogany chairs the color of old claret, royal blue Worcestershire china. Tobeys jugs and vases of Bristol glass.

"Now, look at that!" cried Aunt Em in a low but excited voice. "There's not a thing in that window as nice as some of the things we've got in our own house! Do you see?"

Lately she had taken to calling the old house where she had always lived "our" house. It was as if she had adopted Sally for her own child.

"I thought we could turn our house into an antique shop," Aunt Em went on, two bright spots of color in her thin face. "I'm sick of the restaurant business, anyway. Even before last night's disgraceful business I'd made up my mind to end it pretty soon. . . . We could make a fortune selling antiques, Sally. First, we'd get rid of our own old things, and then we'd lay in more stuff. We could go all through New England and buy up old things for a song." Her voice clattered on, full of enthusiasm and eagerness.

"That will be fine," said Sally, trying to feel eager and excited, too.

But, somehow, her heart was not in the new plan. It struck her as being a dull sort of future to look forward to—selling glass and mahogany to people.

That night, lying in bed with her eyes on the stars outside her open windows, she tried to think of some other kind of work that might appeal to her more.

She fell asleep without succeeding. She had lost, for a time, the thing she called her "pep."

The next morning, before 10 o'clock, Mabel was at the house. She came driving up in Bea's little red car, and she had the baby all rolled up on the seat beside her.

Sally saw her coming from the breakfast room window, where she sat polishing some old Sheffield silver that Aunt Em had made up her mind to sell.

She laid down her polishing cloth and hurried to the front door.

"Why, Mabely dear, what's wrong?" she asked, for Mabel's eyes were pink and swollen from crying, and she breathed unevenly. "What's happened?"

"Plenty!" said Mabel. "Plenty!"

Close Roll Call Tonight

With the goal believed in sight, East Liverpool's eleventh annual Red Cross roll call will close tonight.

Miss Florence Updegraff, director, and her co-workers, aiming to enroll more than 1,500 persons and collect at least $2,000, redoubled their efforts today to attain the quota voluntarily fixed by the executive committee of the Ceramic City chapter, one of 3,500 in the United States and its possessions.

Although there has been a liberal response to the appeal of the Greatest Mother, now busy in relief and rehabilitation work in flood-swept New England and tornado-torn Washington, scores of East Liverpool people have failed to enroll.

Booths are open today in post offices, banks, theatres and stores, with women in charge, for the enrollment of Red Cross supporters. Cost of membership ranges from $1, known as annual, to $50, life, and $100, patron. Contributions of any amount for local work will be accepted. All but 50 cents of each membership fee is retained for home service.

If you have not enrolled, visit one of the roll call booths before nightfall.

Twofold Remus

George Remus, the Cincinnati "bootleg king" who killed his wife and is being tried for murder, is one of the most interesting characters now in the public eye.

An able lawyer turns bootlegger, makes millions, serves terms in several prisons and emerges from all of them popular with the other prisoners and the officials. He then shoots his wife because of real or fancied offenses, and now, on trial for his life, acts as his own lawyer, with his office in the jail where he is locked up at night. Put that plot in a novel or play, and it would be pronounced melodramatic and absurd.

Remus the lawyer, sane and clever, defending Remus the killer on the ground of insanity—that is merely the latest and most dramatic of the contradictions making up this man's life. He maintains that his action is logical enough; Remus, now sane, is defending Remus for a deed he committed while temporarily insane. It is for psychologists and philosophers to say whether that is legitimate and straight.

The legal task now, he says, is good for him. He sleeps in a death cell, but it isn't so terrible as people think.

"Of course it is a damnable business. But in my consciousness now I'm only the lawyer. Remus is an abstract mentality, if you understand me. I keep myself apart from my client Remus. He is something detached, a mere mental identity."

Many a man charged with murder would be glad of the same chance to shift his identity from Mr. Hyde to Dr. Jekyll in this manner, during the strain of the trial.

Self-Conscious Smoking

Out of New York, on the same day, come two news items concerning women and the tobacco habit.

One is the statement that the passenger agent of the Long Island railroad has declared women welcome in the road's regular smoking cars. An indignant male commuter demanded a separate smoker for women. To which the passenger agent replied that most men "seem to enjoy the presence of women in the smoking cars." The suggestion is subtly conveyed that any man who doesn't, must be a chronic groucher who won't let his wife and daughters smoke even at home.

The other is concerned with the opinion on this very subject of Mr. A. B. See, wealthy elevator manufacturer. He has long been opposed to women's smoking. Now it comes out that his opposition is based on no such old-fashioned theory as that a woman has no right to smoke. No, no! That he no longer questions. But here's why.

"A man lights his cigaret or pipe or cigar unconsciously, while at play or reading or otherwise engaged.

"But a woman, before the disease takes hold of her, lights her cigaret with a flourish of the hand, throws back her head, puffs the cigaret smoke high in the air and glances around, wondering how many people are admiring her great bravado."

Could anything be more obnoxious? Realizing the impossibility of training women to smoke unconsciously, with no thought to spectators, Mr. See sees that the only remedy is for them not to smoke at all. It is a pleasant gesture with men, but a maddening disease with women.

Main Street In Texas

After a run of public prejudice against Main streets in general, and an apologetic attitude toward them on the part of towns possessing such thoroughfares, here comes a surprise. Odessa, Tex., which has had a "Grant avenue" for over 40 years, proposes to change it to "Main street."

Maybe they haven't ever read Sinclair Lewis' novel in Odessa. More likely they have read it and pronounced it false, or else they don't care what any outsider says. They don't exactly idolize General Grant, and they believe Main street is a perfectly good name, meaning something in itself, and carrying with it no disagreeable suggestions.

Is this a sign that Main street is coming back? Very likely. Main street always comes back. And it usually deserves to. For if invidious comparisons must be made, we may as well admit that the Main streets of the small towns in this country are more American than its Broadways and La Salle streets and Pennsylvania avenues, and probably more important and durable.

The Little Scorpion's Club—

(© Fontaine Fox, 1927, The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The "butter and egg man" has about passed out as a distinct Broadway type. He was, in a measure, kidded out of existence. He was popularly supposed to be any gentleman of beaming countenance who wore white socks, came from anywhere west of Jersey City, carrying a snap purse.

Broadway was supposed to take him in the manner of Grant taking Richmond. He was fair game for every little gold digger who could slip him out of a month's rent for the apartment and the fly-by-night wise boys with an inside tip on a sure shot.

He reached the eminence of having a play written about him as the sure thing angel for theatrical productions. This was the last role of the talented Gregory Kelly. Every lady who lived lightly was supposed to have a "butter and egg man" of expansive girth who kept her in orchids and jewels.

He was the heavy-sugared daddy—the supreme in sapidity. And while his type was plentiful there were not so many of him as supposed. The eternal kidding was largely responsible for the snub in supper club attendance. Good Time Charlies did not enjoy being pointed out as suckers.

Men who really enjoyed a ringside table grew skittish about the ridicule that went with an evening out. They could sense the snickering behind their backs. Headwaiters suffered, too, for those who gave golden notes trimmed the portholes down to a dollar bill for fear of a laugh.

Hostess and masters-of-ceremonies had a habit of making a visiting so-called Rabbit a target for sly cracks. Songs were sung about his predilection for shucking down a roll of bills to the rubber band and receiving nothing in return but a sneer. It was a fine example of killing the goose that laid the golden eggs.

Many claimed to be the originator of the term, but the best authority is that Walter Catlett, the comedian, playing a spending yoked part about seven years ago, referred to himself one night in an impromptu manner as "A big butter and egg man from upstate." Thus the name was likely coined.

Tin Pan Alley tells of a composer hurrying along 47th street. A friend stopped to inquire about all the haste. "I just heard a wonderful melody," he said, "and I'm going home to compose it."

Abe Martin Says:

While failure in private business may not be a recommendation for a political office, it's nearly allus the real incentive. A pedestrian stood up for his rights almost five minutes here today.

It is not a jesting matter that many popular tunes were boldly pilfered from old masters. In Ziegfeld's office one day I heard a well-known composer play a new tune for the Folies maestra.

"That's good," said Ziegfeld in his famous drawl, "but where did you steal it?" The composer merely permitted himself the luxury of a knowing grin.

On the other hand many able composers have profited little from hits that swept the world. A conspicuous example is that of the talented Victor Schertzinger who wrote "Marcheta," perhaps the best known song in the last decade. Songs come and go, but most of us remember this haunting refrain. Schertzinger sold the song outright for what he could get. A publisher in his high-priced way sent him $100. It so incensed the composer he tore up the check and forgot about it. When the song reached its amazing vogue, a lawyer friend of his own accord and secured a small commission on sales for his friend. It amounted to a few paltry thousands. On a regularly prescribed royalty basis, it would probably have netted a quarter of a million for the composer.

The high-water mark in song sales is said to have been reached by Irving Berlin with "Alexander's Ragtime Band." It founded the young man's fortune, and he still regards it as the best tune he ever composed. It remained popular for three successive years, and now then it has a revival which boosts its sales.

My opinion, backed by many who know more about the subject, is that several composers have topped Berlin in melody and originality. But Berlin stands for something or other. I forget just what.

A Mexican Gusher.

The Bureau has a short film, the Story of a Mexican Oil Gusher, that is, however, dramatic, colorful, and vivid. It is built around the bringing in of the Tierra Blanca No. 54, one of Mexico's largest gushers. It begins with the discovery of a bubbling seepage of petroleum in the jungle and shows Mexican peons cutting down the heavy jungle growth with machetes and axes, caterpillar tractors bringing in material for the erection of a derrick which is completed within two days, the excavation for the sump hole and for storage tanks, the process of spudding in, and the stages in drilling a well to a depth of over 2000 feet.

When the gusher—the real actor in this picture—came in there was a rush of gas from the well, the twisted and gnarled wire rope was snapped in two, the string of tools weighing almost two tons was catapulted through the top of the derrick and on falling buried itself 20 feet in the ground, and then a tremendous column of "black gold" spouted high in the air. Brought under control this well had a potential production of 150,000 barrels daily.

The Bureau has another Mexican oil film, entitled the Story of the Mexican Oil Industry, but in view of political and economic conditions in Mexico it is being withheld for the present.

Three films that the bureau has had in circulation for some time show the oil lands of Europe and Africa. The first shows an oil field at Wietze, Germany, the Celle oil field, and the Pechelbunn field near Strassburg in Alsace, with a drill in action and the production of oil by mining the oil sands; docks at Havre, France, with a view of tankers and storage tanks and the shipping of oil to Paris by barge on the Seine and by truck.

The second takes the audience to Italy, Hungary, the Danube region, and Rumania, opening with a panorama of Naples with Mount Vesuvius in the background. The oil field of Villaja, south of the River Po, with 200 wells, is shown, as are the 100 producing wells of Montecchino and glass-enclosed reservoirs where mud water, and gas are separated from the oil.

Interesting features of this film are the oil port of Giurgiu, in Rumania, the transportation of material to oil fields by bullock wagons, and the Bugstent field with its many hand-dug wells and women raising and lowering pipe by hand.

One of the oldest oil wells in the world, St. Jacob's in Western Galicia, is shown in the third of these films, along with a great deal of scenery in Greece and Egypt that is but remotely connected with the story of petroleum. One reel, for instance, shows a camel train, a desert graveyard, the Pyramids, the Sphinx, the making of pottery, the Valley of the Dead Kings, the entrance to the tomb of Tut-Ank-Amen, the site of ancient Thebes, and the temples at Karnak. Before the film is run out, however, oil tankers are shown passing through the Suez canal, and the delivery of gasoline and oil in Cairo.

Belgian and Portuguese government representatives met in Portuguese West Africa to study economic and humanitarian problems of the colony of the two countries, and as a result the Congo government agreed to build three highways as soon as its railway is completed.

BROOKE COUNTY MAN CONVICTED

Thomas Miletich Faces Long Term for Death of Miner.

After deliberating for almost three hours, a jury in Brooke county circuit court last night returned a verdict of second degree murder against Thomas Miletich, 33, of Windsor Heights, on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Joseph Salopeck, also of Windsor Heights.

Immediately after the verdict was read Senator W. S. Wilkin, counsel for the defense, made a motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. Judge Sommerville did not act on the move, but set December 3 as the date for arguments. Bond for Miletich's appearance at that time was set at $5,000.

Miletich is alleged to have slain Salopeck following a whiskey party in the home of Frank Miller on Windsor Heights. Miletich claims he slew the man in self-defense, after being attacked and slashed with a knife. The state contended that the murder was premeditated, Miletich laying in wait and striking Salopeck down with a club. Learning that the man had died, Miletich fled the following day. It was brought out in the trial, but was later captured at Sloan, Pa. The West Virginia statute provides for a five to 20 year sentence in the state prison for a second degree murder conviction.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

MILLIONAIRE.

Cecil Rhodes, who had as many millions as some people have dollars had two great ambitions.

The first was to do the greatest possible good for barbarous humanity. He donated 13,000 acres of land and $8,000,000 worth of buildings for African missions.

Rhodes' second ambition was to bring the United States and England so close together that there never could be a war between them. Towards accomplishing the second aim he established the $10,000,000 Rhodes scholarship fund.

PROPAGANDA.

Mayor "Bill" Thompson of Chicago wants to counteract pro-British propaganda. Probably he would like to make it impossible for any Chicago boys to become Rhodes scholars. That's foolish. American youths who benefit from Rhodes' generosity have the chance to decide for themselves whether they will be pro-British or pro-anything. A few years in Oxford gives them the opportunity to study the English mind, to get a broader point of view.

$20,000.

A girl whose cheek was scarred in an automobile accident asks $20,000 for the loss of her beauty. The scar is about three inches long and a quarter of an inch broad. Some will say $20,000 is too much. Others will argue that it is not enough. Appearance does make a difference. It makes some people welcome us and others disdain our company.

NEWSPAPERS.

J. C. McQuiston, advertising manager for the Westinghouse company, of East Pittsburgh, declares everybody reads the newspapers to keep abreast the time. McQuiston is right. We hate to be among the few who don't know what is going on.

Advertising men will be interested in the advantages which McQuiston says newspapers have over other mediums: intimacy, flexibility, co-operation ties, reader interest, instant action and ability to check results.

If you don't know what those terms mean ask one of your friends who is in the advertising business.

STARS.

An explorer argues that science shows the possibility of there being life of some kind on some planets or some of the stars. The topic is safe enough. No one can prove he is wrong. There is a cash award waiting for the first person who talks to Mars but no one has claimed it.

Strawberries the size of duck eggs, onions weighing three and one-half pounds each, apples tipping the scales at 18 ounces and leeks more than 12 inches long, have been raised by a man of Bath, England, who, with his son, has won 7,500 prizes for garden products.

Dr. Melville Cumming, who last year organized a system for co-operative shipments of strawberries in Colchester county, Nova Scotia, has been appointed director of the recently created division of marketing and will make products of that province known to the world.

Modern young women are a great advance on what their grandmothers were, although they are apt to be rather too hoisterous, while young men of today are very gentle and gracious, recently declared Sir Edmund Gosse, the famous writer, now in his seventy-ninth year.

HE FEASTS WITH THE PHARISEES

He was not ignorant of the scheme of Phariseism and knew that His enemies would resort to many things in order to ruin His influence in the eyes of the people. Yet He accepted the invitation and went in and sat down to meat.

The Pharisees had not long to wait for an act of criticism, for Christ had purposely avoided the ceremony of cleansing before sitting down to eat. Such neglect in the eyes of the Pharisees was equal to adultery for they invariably bathed before a ceremony, not because of personal cleanliness but because they were bigoted and exclusive and wished to be uncompromising with humanity in general.

This act gave Him an opportunity to speak. Now, do ye Pharisees cleanse the outside of the cup and of the platter, but your inward part is full of wickedness and extortion. Ye foolish ones, did not he who made the outside make the inside also. Woe unto ye Pharisees, who love the chief seats in the synagogues and the salutations in the market place.

"I'll run in and get each of us an apple," Teddy shouted to his two boy friends.

"ALL RIGHT!" they shouted. "Hurry!"
Teddy liked apples. . . even better than he liked cookies.
When Teddy got to the apple-bowl he found just two apples!
"Oh!" Teddy exclaimed in a disappointed voice. "Now, what shall I do? If I give Joe and Billy these two apples, they won't want to take them unless I have one. It would be sticky to cut them. What can I do?"
He could hear the boys calling for him to hurry out to play.
"I'll take both the apples and an orange. . . and let them choose. Perhaps one of them likes oranges better than apples, anyhow. Mother would say . . . to use my judgement . . . and I think that's the fairest thing I can do."
Joe chose an apple, but Billy liked oranges better . . . and Teddy had the other apple.
"I was a good judge, wasn't I?" Teddy said between bites.

A favorite Personal Car with Big Car Owners

You would be astonished to know how many owners of two or more cars leave their larger cars at home, to drive the Essex; for they sacrifice no comfort or performance their larger cars can give, and they enjoy definite advantages in driving ease and handling. And these same advantages appeal to every owner, no matter what his previous car experience. Essex ownership is a progressive discovery of satisfactions and enjoyments that grow with possession and of which performance is but an item.

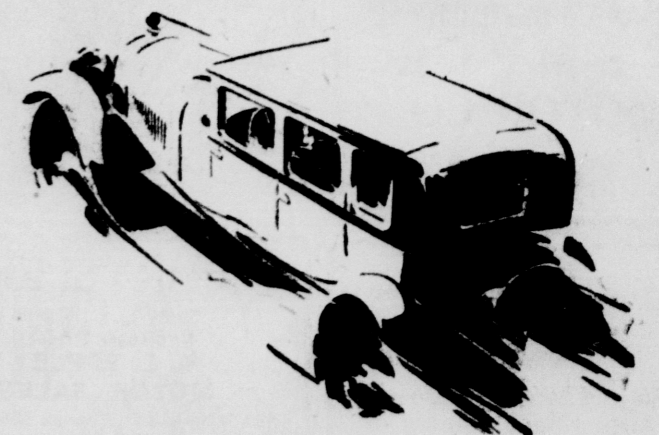

Essex is engineered and balanced to a riding ease that seems to erase the ruts and ripples of the road, and operation ease is so simple and effortless that the lightest gesture controls it.

The Essex Super-Six high-compression motor converts waste heat to power, developing more than 2½ times the power its size ordinarily rates it.

In performance brilliancy it achieves a new high mark even for Essex.

In its sustained stamina, smoothness and durability you see but one of many advantages for which the Super-Six principle accounts.

Here you have 50 miles an hour all day long—far greater speed if you want it—flying smoothness in action—dynamic appeals that win you in a ride. This amazing Super-Six performance and quality are economical to buy and engineered to lowest operation and maintenance cost.

"7TH HEAVEN" AT AMERICAN

Screen Version of Stage Play Here for Four Days.

"7th Heaven" opens a four-day run at the American Monday.

This picture, based on the play by Austin Strong, is said by all critics to be one of the finest productions of any type ever screened.

The atmosphere of the Paris Montmartre, where the plot of the story is laid, is accurately carried out in the settings and the photographic effects. The story follows the play itself, but bringing into actual view those things that could only be talked about in the play, thereby heightening the interest and adding greatly to the entertaining value of the picture.

The characterizations of the players are said to be inspired, particularly that of Janet Gaynor, who appears as the winsome, frightened and finally glorified "Diane," and Charles Farrell, who is the handsome, egotistical, generous and thoroughly lovable "Chico."

"7th Heaven" is the story of two of the lowest types of Parisians, a worker in the sewers of Paris and a wife of the Paris streets. But because of the glorious doctrine of courage which it preaches and the marvelous things it does to both of their characters it has been called one of the greatest and one of the most beautiful love stories ever written.

Added features includes news, topics and comedy with a special musical setting by both the organ and the orchestra. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night the "Feather Party" takes place at 9 o'clock, when two Thanksgiving Turkeys will be given away.

Wilce's Job Against Big Ten Title In Ohio-Illinois Battle

BUCKEYE GRID DRAMA DRAWS 75,000 CROWD

Defeat for Scarlet May Mean Passing of Coach; Zuppke Needs Victory to Clinch Conference Honors.

By Davis J. Walsh.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 19.—In the midst of a melodrama featuring a coach fighting for his official life against a team fighting for a major championship Ohio State and Illinois will renew their famous series of the gridiron this afternoon before a capacity homecoming crowd of 75,000 at the local stadium. Victory for the Illini will mean that the Big Ten title is theirs almost by acclamation for the best Minnesota can hope to show is a record somewhat depreciated by its tie with Indiana.

Defeat for Ohio State, it is intimated in some quarters, will mean the passing of Dr. John Wilce as head coach of the team after thirty years in the chair of public culture here. Equally insistent was another report this morning that the doctor will stay regardless of what this day may bring forth.

The majority, inspired by the past records of this most uncertain series, seemed to think that it might bring forth almost anything including one of those festive upsets so common to the merry pastime. It has occurred to me that the upset in question might very well be sustained by the first Ohio man to get in the way of the Illinois interference.

Every man to his own hunch, of course, but it might appear that this underdog racket has been over emphasized in advance of the game and that, if Zuppke hasn't capitalized this situation to the fullest extent of the law in duly haranguing the Illini, he isn't the man I think he is and I'm sure he wouldn't deceive me. The success of the underdog thing is predicated on the element of surprise and local tongues and typewriters have been too busy all week telling Zuppke how the Buckeyes are going to surprise him.

Barring the possibility of this overnight miracle being achieved with the Buckeye squad, everything indicated an Illinois victory. The local team, its coach heckled by outraged Alumni and itself beset by internal injuries or something, has been beaten by Northwestern, Michigan and Princeton. The Illini have won four conference games without a defeat and, outside the pale, have been tied only by Iowa State.

They, therefore, can bring Zuppke his sixth conference championship with a victory this afternoon, since, even if Minnesota disposes of Michigan, the Gophers will be able to muster only three victories against that disastrous foe with Indiana. However, an Illinois defeat and a Michigan victory would scramble the eggs very tastefully with something closely savoring a triangular tie for the title.

But Illinois, with the title in its grasp, really should not blow this one. If it wins, as a matter of fact, it merely will sustain the general understanding that eleven men playing together, are somewhat better than eleven men, playing apart or sometimes, hardly at all. Man for man the difference between the two is not great but, unfortunately for this argument, the game will be played on a basis of one team against another.

If it is decided that way a majority of the crowd will die in great agony, for no homecoming is complete without victory, particularly when few members of the family are absent.

Title Tilts Features In Big 10 Loop

Purdue-Indiana, Chicago-Wisconsin Draw Interest.

By Gene Hoffman.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The swan songsters are about to chant the requiem of the 1927 season. Whether the strains will glorify one unchallenged championship team or spread themselves over a tripartite tie, will not be known until today's final games are over.

The highlights on the interesting card are the Illinois-Ohio State game at Columbus and the Minnesota-Michigan tussle at Ann Arbor. As far as the Western conference race is concerned, these are the only games that count.

Minnesota and Illinois are now tied for first place. If one wins and the other loses, the winner can claim undisputed title to the Big Ten championship. If both lose—and that is one of the possibilities—the conference season will close in a three-party tie, with Michigan climbing into the ranks of the select.

Aside from these two major combats, there are other games among Big Ten teams already reconciled to the status of "also rans" in the championship race. They will do little more than add another chapter to the feud of long standing between rival universities.

For instance there is the Indiana State civil war between Purdue and University of Indiana. The possession of the famous trophy "the old oaken bucket," will be at stake. The game will be played at Bloomington, where Indiana students are so sure of victory that they have already buried "Old Purdue."

Another game between ancient rivals is the Wisconsin-Chicago affair at Stagg field. This has attracted a crowd of 15,000 Badger rooters who last night tried their best to make a campus out of Chicago's Loop district by putting the police force to bed and taking possession of the town.

The fifth Big Ten game of the day will be played at Evanston where Iowa goes up against Dick Hanley's Luckless Northwestern Wildcats. This will be a battle to keep out of the cellar position. Northwestern started the season like a whirlwind, but soon hit the rough. If the Hawkeys win today, Hanley's boys will finish in last place in the Big Ten standing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A touching reconciliation had been effected today between the New York boxing commission and its two latest prank players, Paulino Uzendun, the axe man, and Jack Sharkey, Boston heavy. Paulino was reinstated and will meet Johnny Risko, Cleveland, next Friday night. He was suspended for evading the Phil Scott bout several weeks ago. Jack Sharkey was forgiven and will fight Tom Heenev January 13.

PRO BASKETBALL MAKES ITS DEBUT

CLEVELAND, Nov. 19.—Professional basketball will make its first appearance of the season here tonight when Cleveland meets the Chicago Bruins in the American league's curtain raiser.

Unusual interest is added to the premiere owing to the new rules adopted during the past year.
The Cleveland team, now captained by Dave Kerr, consists of Carl Husta, Nat Hickey, "Cockle" Cunningham, Rich Deighan and Red Skurnick of last year's outfit, and Vic Hansen, newcomer, formerly of Syracuse.

PADDOCK GOING EAST

POLICEMAN BOB McALLISTER
Holds the record for the 100-METER AND THE 150-
YARD DISTANCES

Charlie Paddock is out for revenge and he is going to Gotham to get it. The fleet-footed California star, who still holds the world's record for the 220-yard dash hasn't been in New York since 1920 when he was easily beaten at the Madison Square Garden.

Ever since, in the bosom of Paddock, that defeat has rankled. It now looks as though Charlie may try this winter to wipe out the ignominy of his beating of seven years ago and to convince the haughty east that the coast has faster men.

Paddock was quoted at the National A. A. U. games at Lincoln, Neb., last July to the effect that he would like to wipe out Policeman Bob McAllister's records for the 100-meter and the 150-yard distances.

Paddock once thought he held those records himself. And since he has learned that the Flying Cop owns them he has wanted to set new ones. Now a match between Paddock and McAllister is being spoken of. If ever such an event is held (and it appears extremely likely) it should be a humdinger.

AT NEW YORK—Jack Dorval, New York, outpointed Benny Touchstone, Florida, 10 rounds.
Ralph Smith, Los Angeles, knocked out Phil Knight, Carteret, N. J., in two rounds.

Geneva Team Hurt By Loss Of Halfback

Earl Ewing, Chester Youth Out With Fractured Collar Bone.

EARL EWING, former Chester high school athlete, now a member of Geneva college's undefeated grid team, will play no more football this season, as a result of a fracture of the collar bone, sustained in the game with Allegheny last Saturday. The Genevans are scheduled to take on Thiel today and Ewing's absence will be felt.

Ewing is one of the fastest backs on the Geneva eleven. He is also a good defensive back and is one of "Bo" McMillin's best prospects for next season. Besides being a promising hand at the grid game, Ewing is also a track man. He runs the 100-yard dash and the low and high hurdles. With a little more of McMillin's coaching, he should develop into one of the best track and football men in the district.

He has two more years to show his stuff with the western Pennsylvanians.

MORRISTOWN, Pa.—Bobby Brown, Atlantic City, knocked out Jeff Smith, Mount Holly, N. J., in two rounds.

How THE Other Half Behaves

Right-Footed Loot.

TOLEDO, O.—Police have been searching for a disappointed thief, who discarded a case stolen from the auto of J. L. Valago, shoe salesman, St. Clair street, while it was parked. Ninety good, new, shiny shoes were in the case and not one of them that would fit a left foot. Patrolman Zimanski found the shoes in an alley, evidently thrown away when the thief discovered that all the shoes were for the right foot.

Atone for 25-Year-Old Pilferings. CLEVELAND, O.—Twenty-five years ago Morris Garfinkel operated a small store. One day, although he did not know it, a small quantity of candy disappeared from the store. Now Garfinkel has received a letter from a man containing a money-order for fifty cents, confessing the larceny now quarter of a century old. "Now that I want to be right with God," the man wrote, "this fifty cents will atone for my juvenile pilferings."
